

Media deregulation, as with almost all recent deregulatory actions, benefits the rich at the expense of the people. I am opposed to homogeneous media, increased consolidation, or deregulation of any ownership rules.

Recent events, namely the coverage of the war in Iraq, should remind us of the function of media and the potential destructive influence corporatization has on policy, politics, and quality information.